TECH-ADDICTION MENTORING

Take back your time from tech

DeepRest is Nick Finnemore’s mentoring practice. For five years he has mentored students and young adults through tech addiction, and helped them out of it.

Your first five sessions are free, as a diagnostic.

They work as a diagnostic. With Nick, you look at how tech fits into your days, what it is costing you and what you would like to change, and you find out whether mentoring is right for you.

There is nothing to pay for these five sessions.

GETTING STARTED

How it works

1

Book a free session

Pick a day and time that suits you in the online booking calendar, and confirm it with your name and email address.

2

The diagnostic

Over your first five sessions, which are free, you and Nick build a clear picture of your tech habits and what you want to change.

3

Decide what’s next

After the five free sessions, you decide together whether to carry on. There is no obligation to continue.

YOUR MENTOR

Young, and that’s the advantage

Nick Finnemore has mentored students and young adults for five years. He is young, and that has played to his advantage: he has seen many people go through tech addiction, and has been able to help them get out of it.

What mentoring is, and isn’t

Mentoring is practical, one-to-one support from someone on your side.

It is not therapy or medical care, and it can’t replace help from your GP or a health professional. If you need help urgently, see getting help now.
