MENTORING

How mentoring works

One-to-one mentoring for students and young adults who want to break free from tech addiction, starting with five free sessions.

Who it’s for

DeepRest is for students and young adults who feel that their phone, games or time online have taken over more of their life than they would like, and who want to change that.

Nick has mentored students and young adults for five years, and has seen many people go through tech addiction and come out of it.

What mentoring is

Mentoring is practical, one-to-one support from someone on your side, who has helped others through the same thing.

It is not therapy or medical care, and it can’t replace help from your GP or a health professional.

THE FREE DIAGNOSTIC

Five free sessions to start

Your first five sessions are free, as a diagnostic: a chance to understand your tech habits and what you want to change, and to see whether mentoring with Nick suits you.

There is nothing to pay for them, and no obligation to continue afterwards.

Booking

Each session is booked separately in the booking calendar, which shows how long it lasts and how you will meet. Your confirmation email has the details, and links to move or cancel the session.

WHAT TO EXPECT

From your first session onwards

1

Book a free session

Choose a day and time that suits you in the booking calendar, and confirm it with your name and email address.

2

The diagnostic

Over your first five sessions, you and Nick look at how tech fits into your days, what it is costing you and what you would like to change.

3

Decide what’s next

When the five free sessions are over, you decide together whether to carry on. It is your choice.

Take the first step

Book your first free session online. If you are not sure whether mentoring is right for you, you can ask a question first.
